MOTHER GETS DAUGHTER BACK

MRS. PFIFER RECAPTURES THE CHILD FROM THE FATHER—SHE WENT TO INDIANAPOLIS.

Mrs. W. H. Pfifer, of the Roseland Hotel, returned this morning from Indianapolis, where she went to recover her 2-year-old daughter, which was kidnapped by its father several weeks ago, says the Jacksonville Metropolitan. She was successful.

An account of the kidnapping appeared in The Metropolitan at the time of the disappearance of the child, and it was learned that the father had taken it to his mother's home in Indianapolis. Mrs. Pfifer, as was stated at the time, was heartbroken, but after counsel with her mother and her grandmother, Mrs. M. E. Perkins and Mrs. A. M. Douglas, she departed on the trip north to see the husband and father in order to persuade him to return the child to its mother. On her arrival in the Indiana city, Mrs. Pfifer made her way at once to the home of her mother-in-law, and going to the back of the house, found the child playing with its paternal grandmother, Mrs. Pfifer then picked the child up, and regardless of the objections of the old lady, left at once for the South, without seeing the husband.

Pfifer is a partner in the Hall Wall Paper Company, on East Forsyth street, and is a paper hanger by trade. Many efforts at reconciliation between the couple were attempted, all to no avail, and the breach seemed as time went on to widen instead of diminishing.

Married Life.

Three years ago Mr. and Mrs. Pfifer were married, and lived for a while happily with her mother, Mrs. Perkins, at the Roseland Hotel. Then trouble came, and one year after the birth of their daughter they separated. Mrs. Pfifer continued to live with her mother and kept with her the child who has caused the present trouble. It was a year last March since the separation, and during that time Pfifer called often to see his daughter. Many times he took the child for a ride or walk, and sought a reconciliation with his wife, through her mother, Mrs. Perkins.

Beautiful Tributes to Memories of Senators Mallory and Bryan

Speaker of the house, fellow members of the legislature, ladies and gentlemen: Having been appointed by the president of the senate on the joint committee to draft resolutions upon the death of Florida's distinguished senators, Hon. S. R. Mallory and Hon. W. J. Bryan, my own inclination as well as a sense of duty, tells me I should at this time in the presence of this legislative body, drop a flower to the memory of our honored dead. It was my privilege to know these gentlemen well, and to me, pleasing indeed it is to add my testimony to the sublimity of their genius and declare the splendor of their moral and intellectual worth.

These able statesmen strictly regarded "public office a public trust," and, during the whole of their public career not once did they engage in graft, fraud, or speculation. Right and justice was their purpose, honor was their compass, virtue was their pilot, love of country was their glory; and in the private walks of life no cloud ever darkened the luster of their reputation. No blot ever dimmed the purity of their integrity, no stain ever soiled the cleanness of their lives, these noble attributes of which they were the happy possessors, in the words of an eminent American, entitles them to the highest, the most resplendent niche in the sacred pantheon of immortality, and when you, the members of this legislature, shall be summoned to your eternal home you may enter the golden gate truly applying to Stephen R. Mallory and Wm. J. Bryan the words of a distinguished Floridian.

"No prouder names in marble sleep enshrine, No nobler souls the statesman's graves confine."

MORNING SESSION.

During the morning session the senate done little except to refuse to reconsider the vote by which the Beard pilotage bill was indefinitely postponed and to discuss further the Humphries bill authorizing the state board of commissioners of state institutions to purchase a prison farm.

The house passed the bill by Senator Broome providing that jurors serving for a part of the day shall be paid for the entire day. This has been done in every circuit except the Second and was introduced by Senator Broome to cover that one.

The house also passed the bill by Butler of Dade, chartering the Great Council of Florida, Improved Order of Red Men, and the bill by Wells, of Bradford, requiring county commissioners and members of county boards of public instruction to give bond.

Governor Gilchrist submitted a special message to the legislature today, reviewing the Waller claim and recommending that the 1907 appropriation of $25,000 be made available for Col. Waller.

Thornton, of Volusia, introduced a bill in the house placing all toll bridges under the control of the rail-
